CURRICULUM VITAE

NAME ALEX DUNCAN
DATE OF BIRTH 14 November 1949
NATIONALITY British and South African

EXPERTISE

Alex Duncan has worked as a development practitioner, researcher, manager, and consultant economist in many parts of Africa, Asia and Europe, and at strategic level for several development agencies. Most of his current work is on the political economy of development and he has had a particular long-term interest in eastern and southern Africa.

His work, which has been funded directly by governments, the main international development agencies, and the private sector, has included:

- strategy development, policy studies and evaluations for governments and international agencies (including the UK government's DFID, other European governments, the World Bank, the European Commission and UN agencies);
- policy and institutional analyses of subjects including the political economy of development, governance, public expenditure management, strengthening the private sector and markets, agriculture, rural development, land reform and food security. Inter alia, he has been closely involved with initial thinking on the 'Drivers of change' and 'Making markets work for poor people' approaches to development problems;
- designing and delivering, some 30 times, a three-day course 'Political Economy in Action', for ten of the major multilateral and bilateral development agencies, in twelve countries;
- long-term support for development agencies, ministries and planning units;
- organisational reviews, evaluations and assessments of development effectiveness;
- financial assessments of organisations and of Trust Funds;
- communication at senior levels, public presentations, staff training and report-writing; and
- experience in some 30 – 35 countries; in the most recent years working visits have included Rwanda, Bangladesh, India, Yemen, Somaliland, Nigeria, Kenya, Tanzania, Zambia and South Africa.
